Dermatological Accreditation

Substance: The Skin Health Alliance's (SHA) independent dermatological committee led by Dr. John English, contact dermatitis expert with Queen's Medical Centre, Nottingham, UK thoroughly reviewed the technical dossiers submitted by ATG's research and development team.

The SHA committee meticulously assessed the skin safety credentials of not just the finished product but of each constituent element. This review included thoroughly examining the scientific and technical data behind the product, how it is manufactured and ultimately used by the consumer. Further supporting evidence pertaining to ATG's regulatory obligations through REACH compliance and Oeko-Tex® Standard 100 certification was openly shared with the committee. Also the environmental impact of design, manufacture and disposal of the product was thoroughly appraised.

Conclusion: The SHA expert committee concluded that ATG's research meets the SHA's strict validation criteria and therefore we are happy to award ATG Hand Safety Gloves dermatological accreditation.
